Strawberry tea

Though 1947 was a wonderful summer I don't think I remember such sustained heat as we had in July and earlier this month. Luckily we had just enough to revive Alan's garden before we visited this year before returning to gobble up the strawberries and Phyllis' perfect scones with cream. If only we could count on that weather we could pick our own next year. Alan was the usual genial host, showing us round his amazing collections indoors and out, and dispensing much needed glasses of water. Thanks also to Betty and the team for all the preparations.

Summer Fantasy

Erika and Jane led the fashion parade – and what a feast of summer puddings met our eyes, thanks to their coordination of contributions. I was not alone in helping myself to thirds – though your secret's safe with me, Terry. Everyone had taken trouble to dress for the occasion, which well deserved the photo –
